- The final round race will use the scores accumulated from the 4 motos and also the IJSBA official Closed Course point system.
- When the number of riders is more than the maximum number of watercraft allowed on starting line, Heat & LCQ systems will be used.

➤ Race site information

- From Suvarnabhumi Airport (or Bangkok area), the recommended way to go to Pitsanulok is by car, heading up north. After 240 KM, you will pass Nakhon Sawan City before you take the No.117 route, heading to Pitsanulok for another 124 KM. The main road taking you to Pitsanulok is a big and convenient road, ensuring a smooth drive for you.

Pitsanulok is a very important and interesting province since it stands as "the Gateway to the North of Thailand". To start with, on the eastern border with Phetchaboon province, natural tourist attractions abound such as Phuhin Ronggla National Park and many waterfalls. Only 65 KM to the west stands Sukhothai that earns the title "The World Heritage". And 3.5-4 hours away to the north, you can either choose to go right to Nan, a small but charming city with its own long history and impressive cultures, or go left to Chiangmai, another well-known destination that offers you an endless list of activities to do. (More information can be found at www.tat.or.th)
